WITNESSES FOR THE STATE

Their Testimony Does Not Establish McDonald's Connection With the Crime—Case of the Defense.

Special Dispatch to the Standard.

MISSOULA, June 30.—The Angus McDonald murder case was resumed before Judge Woody promptly at 9:30 o'clock this morning. The first witness examined was William, the "Spotted Eagle," a full blooded Kootenai Indian, who appeared on the witness stand gaudily attired according to the latest Indian fashion. Charley Finlay, another Indian, was sworn in to interpret Mr. "Eagle's" remarks from Kootenai to Flathead, and Michelle Reavis, a blind Indian, carried the second hand statement down the line in his choicest English. The attorneys for the defense, ever skeptical, had sworn in an Indian who enjoys the somewhat distinctive title of "One Eyed Riley," to see that no portion of the "Eagle's" remarks were side-tracked or enlarged upon, in their journey through the craniums of the braves from Kootenai and Flathead. This witness and his successors on the stand, McSim, also a full blooded Indian, were not important witnesses, merely corroborating the evidence introduced at the trial yesterday.

The proceedings were somewhat enlivened by a little tilt between Judge Woody and Prosecuting Attorney Denny, in which the latter came out second best, being completely squelched when the venerable jurist compared him to an old woman, inasmuch as he always insisted on getting in the last word.

Most of the evidence introduced during this morning's session strengthened the theory that McDonald was very drunk on the day on which Stevens was killed, but as the prisoner is charged with murder and not drunkenness, it was necessary to bring him into closer connection with the crime.

Frank Hammond, a young man from Horse Plains, testified that he saw McDonald about 9 o'clock on the night of the murder, and that McDonald said to him, in a conversation concerning the crime, that he thought he had killed the

— and was glad of it, but that he afterwards denied any knowledge of the affair. Joe Thomas, a constable from Horse Plains, told the story of the finding of the body of Stevens and the subsequent arrest of McDonald.

The afternoon session was rather tame at the commencement, and Juror McEntyre took advantage of the fact to enjoy a few moments' sleep. The first witness, C. C. Willis, justice of the peace at Horse Plains, related the circumstances attendant upon the coroner's inquest, the finding of the body and the condition of the surrounding premises, and was corroborated by J. R. Willis and Coroner Mills. The latter witness testified that death was caused by a fracture of the skull, caused by a blow from a blunt instrument.

The next witness called by the prosecution, Jack Sheppard, proved a fairly good witness for McDonald. He testified that he had heard McDonald relate the story of his travels and pleasures with Stevens and that there was a third man mixed up in the transaction but that McDonald would not, under any circumstances, state who it was.

Isaac Sears, the next and last witness for the prosecution, testified that on the night of the murder he heard McDonald say, "I have done the religious — up." On cross-examination, he admitted that McDonald had never made any effort to conceal any of the facts surrounding the mystery and was induced to remember that he had heard McDonald say to Colonel McGowan, "I can't say, if they hang me, who it was that killed that man." At the conclusion of Mr. Sears' testimony, the prosecution rested.

THE DEFENSE.

The opening address for the defendant was an able effort by Attorney J. K. Wood, and at its conclusion Col. J. A. McGowan of Horse Plains was called to the stand, and in the most concise manner related all the circumstances of McDonald's return to Horse Plains to report the death of his companion, the finding of the body and all the conversations subsequently had with McDonald concerning the killing of Stevens. McGowan's testimony was unbroken in the cross-examination and created a most favorable impression in the court room.

Pierre Paul, a strapping big 230 pound Indian policeman, was called to prove the drunken condition of McDonald when he met the prisoner and his companion on the road a short distance from Horse Plains.

Fred Greenwood, the carpenter who was building a fence on Deener's ranch on the day of the murder, testified that, about 6 o'clock in the evening, he saw three saddle horses, two of which it was shown belonged to McDonald and Stevens, at the spot where Stevens' body was subsequently found. This statement caused quite a sensation in the court room, as it tends to substantiate the theory of the defense that Stevens was murdered by an unknown party who came upon McDonald and Stevens while they were sleeping by the roadside and robbed them.

McDonald himself was paid $70 in gold by Colonel McGowan before leaving Horse Plains in the morning and on his return the money was gone and he was unable to account for it.

The next witness, James Roden, made a positive denial of Sears' testimony that McDonald had confessed the crime in his presence and swore that he never left McDonald's side during the entire night in question and that the prisoner repeatedly and always denied any knowledge of the crime.

Fred McCullough, a rancher, testified that he had known Stevens for some days and that the latter had told him that he had had some trouble on the reservation with the Indians about ranch property and a horse race, and feared violence at the hands of the Indians should he ever go back to the reservation.

It is the theory of the defense that Stevens was attacked by one of the Indians with whom he was on bad terms and murdered and robbed while sleeping.

The case will be resumed at 9 o'clock to-morrow morning, when it is likely that the defendant will be placed on the witness stand. It is the general impression that the county officials have signally failed to make a case against McDonald and that the jury will promptly return a verdict of acquittal.

Serious Accident to a Surveyor—Race Horses in Training—New Population, Special Dispatch to the Standard.

BOZEMAN, June 30.—Will Shaw, a young man in the employ of County Surveyor C. M. Thorpe, met with a serious accident Wednesday, while at Senator Hoffman's ranch, one mile south of the city. J. L. Dorsh and Mr. Shaw, having completed the survey of a ditch, were preparing to return to the city, when one of their horses became frightened. To better control the team Mr. Shaw jumped to the horse's head, but was kicked and thrown down by the frightened animal. On examination it was found that the young man had sustained a double fracture of the leg below the knee. He was brought to town and made as comfortable as possible.

W. H. Rice, who has been training a string of horses at the race track for more than a month, left Wednesday for Anaconda with the best of his flyers. Among the fast horses trained by him at this city are: St. Thomas and Rocky Mountain, owned by Senator Hoffman; Ermine, owned by T. H. Kindschmidt; Valia, owned by Huntly & Clark; Halifax, William Bickett, owner; also one or two thoroughbreds owned by Mr. Rice. These flyers will make the Montana circuit. St. Thomas and Viola afterwards will be taken East and South.

There was born on Sunday morning to Josie Clingerman a daughter.

Cooke City Items.*Special Correspondence of the Standard.

COOKE, June 28.—W. E. Nichols and bride came into camp from Chicago late yesterday evening.

Sheriff Condon came in yesterday and put attachments on all the property belonging to Henderson Mining and Mining company, and Robert Burns has come as acting receiver for M. E. Fitzgerald and others of St. Paul. This state of affairs was brought about undoubtedly by the extravagant methods of the general manager, W. E. Nichols, and a crisis has been looked for for some time. The force of men in the cyanide mill has been waiting for back pay for six months or more and the other members of the Henderson company found this the only way out of the present difficulty. Nichols & Clutenden have made an assignment to George L. Casey of Livingston, and their place of business is closed.

It is hopefully expected now that the cyanide mill, under a new and competent management, will soon be started to work again and prove to be what its late short probation promised it would be, a great financial help to Cooke and the entire district.

Thomas Robbins had the misfortune to dislocate his shoulder while having a "tussle" with a refractory horse on Friday last. The necessary aid was at once given him and he is doing well.

Charles Wiseman, Steve Frederick, Pat Smith and Henry Macarthy are in from Butte.

Judge Collins and the Frost brothers are also again seen on our streets.

S. J. Warren of Helena has come to Cooke with the intention of starting a butcher shop here.
